Dr. Hardin Coleman is a professor of Counseling Psychology and Dean of the School of Education at Boston University. His expertise is in minority student achievement, culturally relevant interventions with diverse populations, and the assessment of multicultural competence in counseling. He received his PhD in Counseling Psychology from Stanford University. In 2007 Dr. Coleman received the Kenneth and Mamie Clark Award from the American Psychological Association which honors psychologists who have made outstanding contributions to the professional development of ethnic minority graduate students.

Acknowledgement

Funded in part by a Graduate Psychology Education grant from the Health Resources and Services Administration of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.
Schedule

4:30 p.m.
Counseling Psychology doctoral students research presentations

5:30 p.m.
Keynote Speaker: Hardin L. K. Coleman, Ph.D.
- Professor and Dean in the School of Education at Boston University

Presentation Title:
School Counseling and Closing the Achievement Gap

7:00 p.m.
- Catered reception in O’Donnell Hall, Lobby
- Poster presentations of College of Education graduate students’ research projects

Doctoral Student Presentations

Rebecca L. Pruitt, M.S.
Self Compassion as a Mediator and Gender as a Covariate in the Relation Between the Subscales of the Anger Rumination Scale and Life Satisfaction for Latinos

Kayla Boland
Perceptions of Therapist Empathy and Credibility when Working with Survivors of Sexual Assault

Steve R. Pereira, M.S.
La Frontera Cósmica: Exploring Spiritual Holism in the Southwest Borderland

Alejandro Cervantes, M.S.
Escúchame porque Tengo Voz: Increasing Mental Health Awareness of Latino Male Adolescents in a Secondary School through the use of Testimonios

Wiley Stem, B.S.
Psychological Quality of Life in an LGBT sample: Correlates of Stress, Mindful Acceptance & Self-Esteem

Additional Poster Presentation

Chadrhyn A. A. Pedraza, Ed.M.
Asian American Students in a Hispanic-Serving Institution: A Constructivist Grounded Theory Approach to Exploring the Impact of Social and Campus Environment Experiences on Racial Identity